

Course of Private International Law and International Procedure
Academic Year 2018-2019 (I semester)
Professor Luigi Daniele

PROGRAMME

- Scope of the International Private Law
- Legal sources of International Private Law
- International jurisdiction
- Applicable law
- Recognition and execution of foreign judicial decisions
- Applicable law in the area of contractual obligations
- Applicable law in the area of non-contractual obligations

SUGGESTED TEXTBOOK:

FRANCO MOSCONI – CRISTINA CAMPIGLIO, Diritto Internazionale Privato e Processuale, Volume I, Parte generale e obbligazioni, Settima edizione, UTET giuridica, 2015 (or newer if any).

DEVELOPMENT

The course will be held in the I semester. Lessons will take place twice a week for two hours and will be broken into teaching modules. In some cases, materials that students will have to prepare in advance for the lesson will be indicated and published on the web site. Moreover, other integrative teaching activities might be organized (Exercises, seminars, lectures etc.).

ATTENDANCE AND EXEMPTION TESTS

At the end of every lesson or other integrative teaching activity, attendance signatures will be collected.

At the end of every teaching module, students who will have attended at least the 75% of every module or other teaching activities will be admitted to take one or more exemption tests.

These tests will consist of questions concerning a judgment or another legal document with written “open” answers. The evaluation will be individual and assessed through votes out of thirty, followed by a collective discussion. The passing of each test will imply the possible exemption of the corresponding part of the programme during the exam. It is possible to refuse one or more votes. In this case the exemption test will not be considered for the corresponding part of the programme.

LEGAL CLINICS

Beside the course, a “legal clinic” will be organized. Teams of students regularly attending the lessons (as for the exemption tests) organised will prepare and discuss, in writing and /or orally, a case raising issues of Private International Law and International Procedure. Minimum and maximum participants: nine/fifteen. In case of too many students asking to participate, the students with the best assessment for the exemption test will have priority. The participation in the Legal Clinic will be individually evaluated and will be taken into consideration for the final exam.